Khabbar Follies

In this section, Khabbar looks into the Konkani community and anything and everything that is Konkani from a Konkani point of view. The names will never be published but geographic location will be identified in general terms.

There is no doubt in my mind that Khabbar is a part & parcel of life of Konkanis in North America. In fact, Khabbar has developed a special relation with most of the Konkani families and here are some examples of those close encounters of a different kind.....

The Konkani Sarmelan-2008 theme is "Awakening the Konkani in You" and I did not know how appropriate it was till these two recent incidents:

I was involved with NAKA to raise funds for KS-2008 by hosting a fund raising dinner in Houston. The turnout was less than expected and I was a bit worried. But, to my surprise, the money raised was much more than I had anticipated! That too, younger generation Konkanis came forward with substantial amount!! Asked why she gave a $1,000 check, this young single working woman, replied, "Vasanthmaam, these Sarmelans are unique events that have helped us to keep our identity alive here. I wish I had given more. We look forward for this and we want to support all the efforts for these Sarmelans".

During KS-2006 in Canada, the Kalash Transfer could not be done. After Bay area of CA Konkanis decided on hosting KS-2008, a proper Kalash Transfer function was held during the KISS picnic in TX in April 2008. To participate to this hallmark event, five key people involved with KS-2006 & KS-2008 (from CA & Canada) came to the picnic spending their own money! Asked what motivated them to do that, replied all of them, "These Sarmelans are our & our kid's future and we should do anything and everything to support this".

Don't these incidents clearly prove that the Konkani spirit in us has been awakened by these Sarmelans!?!

Khabbar will publish all the developments and progress made by The North American Konkani Association (NAKA) on an on-going basis. Send your constructive suggestions to any of the Directors of the NAKA Board.

This quarter, NAKA Board has been busy with fund raising efforts for KS-2008 and also in selecting the site for the next Sammelan.

The NAKA sponsored Konkani Sammelan - 2008 (KS-2008) in Santa Clara, CA will be an experience no Konkani in North America should miss! Visit their website (<http://www.konkanisammelan.org/2008/default.asp>) to find out all the details of this great event. Truly, this Sammelan will awaken the Konkani in all of us. Be there. It will be worth all your time, money and efforts.

The unofficial Khabbar correspondents in your area who send in the hoon Khabbars on a regular basis are doing an outstanding job. Remember, if it did not appear in Khabbar, then it did not happen in North America! If your area is not represented wholly, let me know and I'll recruit more volunteers. You send the news items via email (khabbar@hotmail.com). It is a pure joy seeing outstanding academic excellence of our kids. Keep it up kids and may God bless you all.

On the Quiz front, Khabbar has still remained as a champ. I do not think, anyone of the Khabbar readers are close to getting right answers to the quizzes! Come on, give it a try and let's see how many of you will get right answers this time!!

With the Foundation Stone laid for the ambitious project, Konkani Kendra, the Konkani Bhas Ani Sanskriti Pratistan is looking for more financial support. Thanks to Basti Ganapathi Shenoy who has devised a method wherein families wanting to help Konkani Bhas Ani Sanskriti Pratistan can do so with relative ease! Call him at (702)-341-6706 or email: bshenoy@cox.net if interested to extend your help for this worthy cause.

On the political front, congrats to Shanthi Jayakumar who was elected as Alderman for the city of Rollingwood, TX by a landslide margin. Hope, fellow Konkani will take her lead and get involved in the political spectrum of our adopted land. Also, congrats to Sri Yogish N. Bhat who won his Legislative seat in Mangalore, Karnataka, India.

Khabbar will always publish appeals for charity free of charge but cannot collect money on behalf of any charity. Families are encouraged to send the money directly to the concerned charities. It is amazing to see so many appeals come to Khabbar on a regular basis. Khabbar firmly believes in helping our people whether it is in India or here.

Hope peace & tranquility prevails on earth. Hope to see you all the Sammelan in Santa Clara, CA.

Devu Boren Karo.

(prasidh@yahoo.com) was elected in May 2008 to be an Alderman on the City Council. Rollingwood is a one-square mile city with 500 homes and about 1100 registered voters. It is an Incorporated City (details at www.cityofrollingwood.com) with it's governing body of a Mayor and five Aldermen. The term of office is for two years and terms are staggered with the Mayor and two Aldermen being elected in even numbered years and the other three Aldermen elected in odd numbered years.

The election in May 2008 was contested by two incumbents and political newcomer Shanthi. The incumbents who had won overwhelming support in 2006 ended in second and third place with 195 and 190 votes. Shanthi led with a total of 329. Shanthi recalls that the democratic process was fascinating to participate in and proved the power of what can happen when a large number of citizens comes together to effect change.

Shanthi's inspiration for seeking elected office was drawn from

Mahatma Gandhi's quotation "Be the change that you wish to see in the world" and her desire to give back to the community that she has called home for the last 25 years. Her husband Jay and daughters Pratibha and Sidhya and son-in-law Maneesh were fully supportive of her decision to stand for election and are proud of her accomplishments. KONKANI HAPPENINGS

SANJAY RAO, of Sugar Land, TX was the featured speaker at the event organized by Young-TiE on March 13 at the Hilton on the main campus of the University of Houston. The following is a write up that appeared in the local paper:

Sanjay Rao - A New Route to Success By Haider Kazim

HOUSTON - The Indo-American community is replete with success stories of people who have excelled in their chosen fields by dint of hard work, training, knowledge, and resourcefulness. But it may take much more than those qualities to engage in an unfamiliar field and turn what could have been a sure recipe for disaster into a spectacular example of success.

Sanjay Rao, CEO and partner of Southwest Shipyard L.P., told such an amazing story to eager listeners at an event organized by Young-TiE on March 13 at the Hilton on the main campus of the University of Houston. Young-TiE is part of TiE-Houston, an organization devoted to promote talent, ideas, and enterprise as well as inspire the young and upcoming to emulate success stories in the community. Rao, a chemical engineer by education, said he did not know what he was doing when he barged into the shipping industry after his management training at Rice University. He said he knew nothing at that time about the barge industry and did not share any of the lifestyle traits of industry pros. "People in the industry chew tobacco, like to hunt, and go fishing," he said amid laughter. "And I did not do any of these." But the initial lack of knowledge did not hamper him for long to get on top of the business. He was made the CEO and a partner of Southwest Shipyard within a few years of his joining the company, the positions he has been holding for the past six years. Within ten years of his joining, Southwest Shipyard revenues grew from $20 million to $150 million. He hopes to reach $500 million target within the next two to three years. The company provides maintenance and major overhaul services for the inland barge industry, push boats, offshore supply vessels and Galveston ferries. It has also begun manufacturing new vessels at its Galveston and Houston facilities.

Rao offered valuable tips to young and aspiring businessmen and professionals. Rao's PowerPoint presentation gave details of the various stages of growth at Southwest Shipyard and summarized the reasons for success of business strategies. For example, all textbooks offer the advice that a company has to take care of its clients. But at Southwest Shipyard, Rao was able to do this by offering its clients lower prices and shorter turnaround times for repair works. As a result, the clients stayed with them and shifted more of their work to Southwest Shipyard.

Konkani Social Club (KSC) of South Texas and other Houstonite Konkans under the auspices of NAKA hosted a fundraiser for the Konkani Sammelan (KS) 2008 on Saturday, March 22, 2008 at the Madras Pavilion in Sugar Land, Texas. A small group of ardent supporters attended the event. The emcee for the evening was Sheila Shenoy who set the tone for the evening with her charming introductions and persuasive appeals. The entertainment included a maiden Bharathanatyam solo performance by Subhiksha Shenoy.

Subhiksha, an accomplished dancer from Coimbatore, India who recently came to US after her marriage to Vinod Shenoy of Houston, enthralled the audience with her impressive debut. Prashant Mavinkurve of Dallas kept the audience spellbound with his melodious Kishore Kumar songs and his signature stand-up comedy acts. Also, Ramesh Kamath, Suresh and Usha Shenoy and Govind Shetty entertained everyone with some classic hits. As always, the food was scrumptious, and the attendees were ever so generous with their donations with the total for the evening surpassing $20,000. Vasanth Bhat thanked everyone for their support for KS-2008. The evening concluded with dancing to popular Bollywood & Bhangra tunes.

Bees Saal BaadStill KISSing!

About 175 enthusiastic attendees converged to the Fort State Parker State Park to participate in the Konkanis in Southern States (KISS) picnic from April 4 to 6, 2008. The weather was beautiful throughout the weekend and everyone reveled in the festivities. This year marked the 20th anniversary of this annual event and it was led by the Dallas area Konkanis.

As always, the food was delectable with pizza and bhajias on Friday, delicious meals on Saturday specially catered by Madras Pavilion and some exquisite specialties such as madgane, panak, pachdi and nonche - thanks to our own ladies. There were variety of sports, many activities during the day on Saturday and first-class entertainment both Friday and Saturday evenings. This year's theme was "Punjabi" for Saturday evening; Most ladies were decked out in traditional colorful attire of salwar-kameez-dupatta and the gents in salwar-kurta and turban. The entertainment included performances from all age groups with popular songs, classical and Bollywood dances, instrumental pieces and comedy routines. There was plenty of time for socializing and for panchaadika.

This year we had special invitees, Ashok and Amita Bhat from Canada and Ravi and Asha Baliga and Pratibha Kamath from California. Since the Kalash transfer could not take place during KS-2006 in Canada, it was held here. Also, the collection from a recent fundraiser in Houston amounting to over $20,000 was presented to KS-2008 organizers.

Overall, this was another memorable picnic. Kudos to our organizers and the attendees!!

KONKANI OLDER THAN SANSKRIT !?!

By: - Dr. Narendra Pai, Lewistown, PA
Reader Comments to indkonkani@yahoo.com

After reviewing ancient history of the world I have come to a conclusion that Konkani is older than Sanskrit and was the Primary language of the Dwarake or people of Dwaraka. It is common Knowledge that the spoken languages are older than the written languages. There are several word usages in the bhagwad gita which are used as in Konkani. speech. Konkani words are found in several Indo European languages and several Countries.

I have also found several Konkani words in other countries.

Oui -yes in French and Konkani.

Nai,nein no in German and Konkani.

Noveau is new in French and Konkani.

Cullo means buttock in Konkani, Italian and Spanish plural Cullae.

Cullae also means sit in Tulu which means park your Cullae on the Chair.

One of our Sainiks of the Mahabharata war were the Chinese who left to start their own country with a great wall to replicate the wall of Dwaraka. Chinese have last names like Pai, Chang (good) etc.

They respect their elders, have ancestor worship and there is a temple of Yama in China located near a river.

They are referred as Sino as in Sino Indian.

The British Culture was started with a group of Dravidians or druids along with Indo European tribes. The Dravidian's Called Themselves Engle or yenkle or bundes or bunts and they came from Alps (alpa) and hence the name of the country was England. The kshatriyas among them called themselves shettra since they carried a Katti or Scythe they were also called Scythians or Scotts.

The kings were called Rai and (the empire Reich in German) also the Konkani word Raayu and English Royal.

The British Throne is seated on 4 lions and a Blackstone (Shivaling) under it from the hill of Tara (Taranath). This is by definition a Simhasana and is present only in the Mysore throne and the Burmese throne. The British cities ending with ton, burgh and bury are after sthan, pura and puri respectively. The forts are called Cote. When a young man goes to study he is an unmarried Bramachri hence the degree he gets on Graduation is called Bachelors (Batcha?)

Once he is married and is a master of the household he gets a degree called Masters.

All the English cathedrals are based on a Vedic astronomical pattern because they were built on top of druid temples. Britain was named after the Goddess Cali so it was called Caledonia.

According to Swami Shyamendra until 1752 AD the English New Year began on March 25 exactly as the beginning of the Vikram calendar started 2061 years ago which begins the same as the Kali Yuga calendar started 5000 years ago. The word Allemande used by the French and the Spanish for Germany implies home of almighty or Ishwar as Alexander or Ishkander was a slave of Shiva. The other name for slave of Shiva is Rudra alpa or Rudolph.

Hari Cula Hercules.

Pitha graha Pyhtogras.

There was a town in France called Ambiani which is now shortened to Amiens. Ambi stands for Kali and ani for Mother. Ambiani was a tribe of Gaul or Khali. The Capital of the Country is Para eesh or Preee or Paris. Many Indian and Italian names end with ani or anni showing a connection to this mother. Many of the Spanish names have Indian origins. Cali Amba –Columbus. Ram Raj –Ramirez. Vasudev-Vasquez. Rudra-Rudriguez. Manu-Manuel. Venugopal -Venezuela, Venice. Selvadurai-Salvatore San Salvador. Elam, Illam-Villa-Home. The Bread Puri is identical to Burrito, Vasia Harigovinda Bosnia Herzogovina. Servey-Serbia-One of the former President was Radhovan Karadich. Yuga- Yugoslavia. Slovakya-Czechoslovakia. Keshava –Kosovo, Balakrishna-Balkan. Agastha Muni- Augustus-Augustus Ceaser, Kali - Hulia or Julia - Julius Ceaser. Lastly Amerigo Vaspucci came from the Konkani/Sanskrit word AMER or AMAR-immortal. America is named after him.

Hence the name America means that without death. I have a whole article on the Indian origins of Rome which was derived from the brothers Romalux (Romulus) or Ram and Laxman.

Is It Riverfront vacation or Kashi Mutt ?

By: - Dr. Vasudev Prabhu, Mission Viejo, CA

Have you ever thought that you plan for Kashi Yatra and it turns out to be Five Star Riverfront vacation? Now there is something you can do about it, also. Here is my story.

Being Hindu and also GSB, we are supposed to visit Kashi and take a dip in a Triveni Sangam at Prayaag at least once in a life time. Every time I plan to visit , I kept on postponing that once in a life time Holy visit. Early this year I was determined to plan that trip and longing to visit Kashi Vishwanath Temple and get Blessing from that Lord Shiva who is standing there on the Banks of Ganga for last several centuries and protected by Hindu devotees from invasion of Muslim invaders and rulers several times (last one being Aurangzeb). Since flying time of twenty four hours from LA to Mumbai is exhaustive, I wanted to enjoy round trip train journey both ways. Because of off-season in late March, we, three, including my Elder Brother and Vanhi(Bhabhi, sister-in-Law) had no problem getting A/C two tier sleeping coach from Bori Bunder(now it is called Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus) to Allahabad and return from Varanasi(Kashi, Banaras) to Mumbai Kurla station (now called Lokmanya Tilak Station). Accounting about 24 hours train journey each way, we were left with six days of vacation in between to plan in that area of U.P.

Our next question arose about where to stay. Coming from US, folks in India always look to us as status symbol and will hesitate to suggest anything other than staying in five star hotels. But I have not changed my outlook towards those Holy places which I had before coming to America. I had always heard great things about Kashi Mutt from my mother during childhood that it had over 100 rooms and one can get lost looking for your own assigned room. Plus the Mutt is over six hundred years old, and I love staying in old monuments built rock solid with black stone. If people flock to some old ruins and monument in Rome for just a visit, I thought, why not stay in our own lodging at the Mutt built by our own community centuries ago. After some inquiries and contacts, my brother made reservation for a room old fashion way (writing a hand written postal letter to the resident Manager) and followed by a phone call after about a week for confirmation. The friendly manager even offered that he will more than welcome and offered someone to receive all three of us not only at Varanasi but also at the Allahabad station so that our stay at both these Mutts will be comfortable.

On Sunday March 25, we hopped into our A/C compartment around midnight and just went to bed after Kalyan station as there was dark everywhere outside the window. Our cozy little four bed section even had 110v American type connection so that we can hook up our video camera charger and laptop connection. Indian Railways is progressing so fast that my next journey might have facility for internet connection for a nominal charge. Perhaps all can suggest to Laalu Prasad. Since the A/C compartment is served by the attached pantry car catering staff, we were frequently treated with snacks, tea/coffee, cold drinks, etc. our train passed through Madhya Pradesh after crossing some of the cities in Maharashtra. I always used to enjoy frequent stops at several stations and junctions and noise created by those food vendors, plus you can stretch your legs at the station for five minutes. We saw miles and miles of fields of wheat growing plantations as Khandwa was known for wheat trading center. There was no boredom and after about 27 hours of journey (as usual the trail was late about 3-4 hours), we reached Allahabad junction at about 2 am Tuesday morning. To our surprise, driver of the Mutt at Allahabad spotted us immediately and with a hired coolie for our luggage headed towards his Tempo (three wheeler). Our ride in the diesel engine Tempo was rushing thru those quiet and sleeping neighborhood town. We were greeted by house lady with typical Cochhi Amchigele (Konkani) who had made bed for us in a room so that we can take rest immediately after washing.

After early morning shower, Aarti and breakfast we headed towards Sangam where Ganga, Jamuna and underground Saraswati meeting place in the Tempo. Luckily we escaped the time earlier month when Kumbh Mela had taken place; but the dirt and trash left behind by those devotees were still not cleaned up by the city. It was a beautiful sunny day, picture perfect. We boarded a small boat and our guide took us to the knee high bathing place at the tri-point of the rivers. Also, returning on the boat our guide told us to fill the Ganga water before this water merges with the grey water of Jamuna. This water is supposed to most holy and later in Kashi vendors seal this water by soldering the top in small copper jugs. According to legend, This sealed Ganga jal(water) is supposed to be in every Hindu family. When an elderly person in the family is just about counting his/her last breadth, spoonful of Ganga jal from this copper is offered to the dying person in his/her mouth by each family member present. After the sumptuous and delicious lunch Konkani style prepared by Bhatini Maai, we proceeded towards Kashi(Varanasi) by bus. It was a quite a bumpy ride with lots of potholes but fewer than in LA county area, and we reached Varanasi bus station, about half a mile from the Varanasi Railway station. As per instructions, we hired an autorikshaw, and reached Goal Ghar (round house) area beyond which motor vehicles have no access to reach Kashi Mutt; one has to walk to the Mutt about a mile long. Our BhatMam had come to escort us even though directions to the Kashi Mutt with arrows are clearly painted on the building of every corner. After reaching Mutt, the Mutt manager (BhatMam) assigned a room with three twin size beds combined together. Beds were made with very clean sheets and blankets and pillows, etc. It was late in the evening after the Aarti when we reached there, so we ate our delicious supper and after some Panchadiki, we rested for the night.

Since worshipping service staff gets up early in the morning at 5 am for preparation, guests usually sleep until late say until 6:30 or 7 am. Hot water from electric geysers is cut-off at about 8:30 after Aarti at 8 am and breakfast is served at 8:30 am. One can also walk down to those stone stair steps leading to the Ghats for bathing. This was our first early morning. The Mutt is almost like 7-8 story high equivalent of modern building. The Narasimha Deity Mandir is at the highest level and facing east. From the balcony, one can enjoy sunrise in the horizon with magnificent scenery. Down below in the crescent shape Ganga, hundreds of tourist boats rowed by owners. Some tourist take pictures, movies and enjoy and greet the rising sun.

Next day morning, we hired a rental boat, arranged by our Mutt manager, and we were on the row before the sunrise so that we can capture the scenery and magnificent view on our video camera. For 2-3 miles ride, we glimpsed many of the Ghats where thousands of devotees gather to pay homage to Usha Kiran (early morning sun rays). Some locals and western tourists we saw them meditating, Yoga exercise and various other activities. After our one and one half of round along the river, we anchored our boat near the Ghat where Kashi Vishwanath temple is accessible. It is about ¼ mile walk inside from the river bank. Because of terrorist threat, security is very tight. Any metal objects such as cameras, cell phone, watch, even pens are not allowed inside the compound. Due to extreme popularity, always there is a big line and rush. This ShivaLing supposed to most holy among the twelve lings. This Ling has been reference in Puranas and supposed to be quoted in many religious books. Because of its popularity, it is also vulnerable to many attacks by Muslim foreign looters and mughal rulers; last being Aurangzeb destroyed original temple and built mosque on existing pillars of temples. Luckily the original ling was hidden in water by some brave Hindus where present temple was built by Rani Ahilyabai of Holkar family about 250 years back.

We did several activities around the city in next couple of days, such as visit to Sarnath where Bhagwaan Buddha gave first sermon, visit to Banaras Hindu University and new Birla Vishwanath temple, Tulsidaas Ram Charit Manas Exhibit, Sankat Mochan Temple(Hanuman Temple where Abhishek/Aiswaraya Rai visited), Museum of sculpture, etc. Of course we drank lots of Lassi, ate chats, ice-cream, pure milk sweets such as peda, barfi and Banarasi Paan, etc. and purchased Banarasi sarees and Kurta kamiz. This is the best vacation I have ever enjoyed right on the river front. Most of the five star hotels are away from most of the Ghats. From American standard, this type of riverfront view vacations are beyond the reach of average people. Even when we were on vacation during Cairo visit ten years ago, we had paid $200-300 per night at Sheraton Hotel just to have a small view of Nile River. For a fraction in a local currency, we GSB and SB are lucky to have many Mutts in Kashi, Hardwar, Prayag and Kalpi at prime locations. I will be uploading some of the pictures at my BlogSpot <http://konkaniboy.blogspot.com/>

The Secret Revolution of Lord Krishna

The Historical Context of the Bhagavad Gita

Chapter: The Great Nastik Revolt

By: - K. P. S. Kamath, M. D., Cape Girardeau, MO

The revolt against Brahmanism brews

By 600 B. C. a great intellectual ferment was brewing across the Indo-Gangetic plain the like of which India has not seen since. Countless different Kshatriya-inspired philosophies sprang up from the agitated intellect of Indo-Gangetic civilization. Disgusted and disenchanted by the decadence of Brahmanism a number of reactionary groups opposed to it arose over the centuries following the Vedic period. These people who lost faith in the Vedas or Vedic sacrifices came to be known as Nastik –unbelievers or naysayers. Most of these groups were led by Kshatriya nobles. Thousands of wandering sophist known as Parivrajaka crisscrossed the country questioning anything and everything, including the Vedas and Vedic sacrificial rites. They engaged each other in robust public debate on every topic on earth. They challenged their adversaries to win them over or to follow them. The public halls all over the country were packed with curious people eager to learn and experiment with new ideas to cope with life and its vicissitudes. New Age Philosophies thrived everywhere.

People of all Varnas abandon Brahmanism en masse

Disgusted and aggrieved by the decadence of Brahmanism, a large number dissenting Brahmins and Kshatriyas began to abandon it en masse. Lord Buddha (c.563-483 B. C.) and Lord Mahaveera (c.599-527 B. C.), both Kshatriya princes, were the products of this revolt. Over the next few centuries, heterodox religious orders, Buddhism and Jainism, both ascetic and Nastik in nature, began ascendancy under the sponsorship of disillusioned ruling clans and support of even lower social classes. Emperor Chandrgupta Maurya (ruled 321-297 B. C.), the first great emperor of India and protégé of Chanakya, the quintessential Brahmin genius, abandoned Brahmanism, embraced Jainism, became an ascetic and starved himself to death in the manner of Jain monks in South India. His son Bindusara became a supporter of Ajivikas. Bindusara's son emperor Ashoka the Great (r. 269-232 B. C.), gave up violence as well as Brahmanism, and promoted Buddhism, then known simply as Dhamma. He even sent emissaries abroad to spread Buddhism. The Indo-Greek king Menander (Milinda) (r. 155-130 B. C.) and Kushana emperor Kanishka (r. 78-114 B. C.) also embraced Buddhism. Royal patronage of Buddhism made it the dominant religion of India till the rise of Hinduism around 4th century A. D. under the patronage of Gupta emperors.

Two types of Nastik reactionaries emerge

1. The first of these two groups resorted to Sanyasa— literally, “throwing down”— and renounced not only all material comforts but also all socially obligated duties. In other words, not only did they abandon Brahmanism, but also Varnashrama Dharma. Sanyasa became synonymous with the word inaction (Akarma 2:47). They were all known as Sramanas. Within this group, three distinct subgroups emerged:

A. The first subgroup, following the teachings of Gautama Buddha, later developed into Buddhism. This was essentially a rational religion that emphasized right thinking and conduct. Buddhists rejected all aspects of Brahmanism. Character, not birth class, should decide one's greatness, they said. The Buddhist monks were known as Bhikkus as they made their living by begging. The Buddha became a demigod. Beggars became holy and begging became fashionable in India.

B. The second subgroup, following the philosophy of Vardhamana Mahaveera, later on formed Jainism. The hallmark of this religion was absolute nonviolence toward all living things. This religion was clearly reacting to the horror of animal sacrifices rampant with Vedic sacrifices. Some of these monks walked around naked as an expression of their complete renunciation of material things and violence. Mahaveera became a demigod.

C. The third subgroup consisted of individual Ascetics, who renounced everything and wandered in search of the Ultimate Reality. They practiced severe austerities (Tapas) in the form of self-denial and self-torture (17:5-6) as means of mastering their senses to achieve personal liberation from Samsara. Half-naked Sadhus and Sanyasins who wander all over India even now belong to this subgroup.

2. The second major Nastik reactionary group, known as Materialists or Lokayatas, went in the opposite direction. The leading subgroup in this category was Charvakas, who, declaring Vedic teachings as humbug, taught that pursuit of happiness should be the only goal in life. This was a largely rational philosophy which the priests of Brahmanism hated with passion (16:7-11). As we read above, all of their revolutionary literature was destroyed by the Brahmanism fanatics.

Brahmanism faces grave danger

The net result of this trend was that by 3rd century B. C. a large number of people of all classes, especially Kshatriyas, were abandoning the elitist Brahmanism and embracing egalitarian heterodox Dharmas of Buddhism and Jainism. This was no different than disgusted people of “lower castes” and “outcastes” abandoning Hinduism and embracing Christianity, Islam and Buddhism in modern India. Becoming a monk or ascetic not only meant giving up material comforts but also abandoning Brahmanism and socially designated duty ordained by Varnashrama Dharma. To Brahmanism, dissolution of Varnashrama Dharma or class system meant class admixture (Varnasankara 1:41), class confusion (3:24) and its consequences, namely birth of unwanted progeny and decimation of elite class.

The age of invasions

This also happened to be the period when north India experienced waves of fresh invasion from northwest frontier. Alexander the Great invaded India in 327 B. C. From then onwards India was threatened continually from northwest by various border kingdoms: Bactrian, Scythian or Shakas and Kushanas. Abandonment of their Dharma by Kshatriyas could not have come at a worse time. If all aggrieved Kshatriyas gave up their duty, embraced nonviolence and became monks who would protect the country against the invaders?

Brahmanism pleads: Do not abandon your own Dharma!

By third century B. C. the great epic Mahabharata was very popular with the masses. It is very likely that the episode in which Arjuna wishes to abandon his bounden duty in the face of having to kill his own people; and in which prince Krishna gives him a refresher course on the principles of Varnashrama Dharma, was introduced into the great epic specifically for the purposes of invoking sense of duty in the renegade Kshatriyas. Prince Krishna’s advice for him to perform his duty as per the Brahmanism doctrines of the Gunas and Karma (2:2-3; 31-37; 3:5, 27, 33; 18:40-45; 59-60) became the body of the Original Gita. At a somewhat later date Brahmanism scholars inserted additional shlokas into the Original Gita that warned people of dangers of abandoning Brahmanism. First they deplored the dangers of Varnasankara (admixture of upper class women with lower class men) and warned that whoever is responsible for it went straight to hell (1:38-44). They added shloka 2:4-5, in which Arjuna threatens to abandon his Dharma, to set the stage to interpolate the following shloka addressed to Kshatriyas:

3:35: One’s own Dharma, though imperfectly performed, is better than the Dharma of another well discharged. Better death in one’s own Dharma (so one can attain heaven); the Dharma of another is full of fear (of earning bad Karmaphala and going to hell).

The argument here was that not performing one’s own Dharma was a sin (2:33) and also that would bring one dishonor in the society (2:2-3; 34-36). Addressing other classes who were abandoning Varnashrama, the Brahmanism scholars added the following two shlokas:

18:47-48: Better is one’s own Dharma, though imperfectly performed, than the Dharma of another well performed. He who does the duty ordained by his own nature (Guna) incurs no sin (bad Karmaphala). One should not abandon, O Kaunteya, the duty (Karma) to which (Varna/Guna) one is born, though it is attended with evil; for all undertakings are enveloped by evil, as fire by smoke.

In these added shlokas, Brahmins seem to accept the reality that the practice of Brahmanism, as exemplified by Kamya Karma, was less than perfect. “But,” they argued rather perversely, “Other Dharmas are even worse. All Dharmas have something unpleasant about them. As long as you perform your job as per the doctrines of the Gunas and Karma, you will not earn bad Karmaphala.”

The Upanishadic Revolution

Even though this argument had some merit to it from the standpoint of Brahmanism, it was too little and too late in coming. Abandonment of Brahmanism continued to decline steadily. Something was needed to be done urgently from within to either reform Brahmanism or replace it with a New Dharma based a whole new paradigm. To achieve this end, some great Upanishadic scholars decided to rise to the occasion. They decided to eliminate the doctrines of the Gunas and Karma, the very foundation of Brahmanism (4:13), and replace them with the doctrines of the Knowledge of Atman and Buddhiyoga (2:39). This is how the Upanishadic revolution was set in motion in the modified Original Gita. Pkamath001@gmail.com 5/16/ 2008

Book Review

Khil Khilo

The book "Khil Khilo" is written by Smt. Indira Jodumutt, retired Headmistress of Srinivasa Patashala in Mangalore.

This 104 page book is a compilation of 60 Konkani songs written in both Devanagari & Kannada script. The songs include typical Konkani Nursery rhymes and other popular songs. The book takes the reader to the nostalgic era of Konkani life where these songs were in use. These short songs make it easy to read also.

This is Smt. Jodumutt's third book in Konkani and all copies of the book have been sold out. Khabbar is working with NAKA and other sponsors to reprint this book for sale in North America. Also, there is a move to prepare the audio CD of the book which will make it easy to listen to these songs rather than read.

Interested parties can contact Khabbar at khabbar@hotmail.com
